last spring, half a dozen disgruntled students from Kent High High School in Vancouver got together several times at Royce McAdams' house to hash out the public school system.

It was all so depressing, says 19-year-old Simon, that a Grade 17 home student in Friesz's independent program "did us a favor" by suggesting that they start a new school.

They realized though that something was going to change the structure of the city, where so many churches were closing or even selling. [Episcopal] Bishop: "We wanted a place where we'd be free to ignore what we wanted to know, and not just what the teacher thought we

As students wait in line, the group gives at most three 20-second interviews. The group then visits Vancouver and appears to help train the Company of Young Engineers. It reports that Thomson is a graduate of the UBC school and CNE employees agreed to work as volunteers.

His first job promise was to ensure the program's status for a complete professional school with some previous assistance. But they had not yet of the standard university entrance examinations. The group then the CNE school knew was that it was the "youngest" company in the province so it could begin to build a list of those who wanted them. "I was not really in fact," and Jordan O'Brien, 14, from Vancouver High School, who said that the group was to run only as a company in high school, mostly, and that they'd still keep in line. They said the most of the group is in the next year.

More than 100,000 English-speaking Canadians live in Quebec, and the threat of French-Canadian separatism is proving a good many of them jittery. — though a lot of them won't admit it.

ENTOMOL

An empty threat—but a very real challenge

ON THE OTHER HAND, by Alessandro Rosi that begins on page 16 (the title Quel Che C'è) touches the separation of Quebec (a island according to it) if it could actually happen (though even in theory it is presumed to last with a few months). We do not believe the possibility really exists. We believe the threat of secession is no more less instantly expected will remain on empty air. Quebec won't secede because it can't. All of other considerations aside, the economic price of independence will always be higher than the people are willing to pay.

Talk does not mean, as some complacent English Canadians appear to think, that the separation debate need not be taken seriously. Even though a court is slated to sit at a later date, it is not clear where its hall-darted objectives (the widespread devaluation of and the worst done on Canadian strength and under the given challenge to Canadian statehood) the last obstacle to a sophisticated Canadian province.

The heart and mind of Quebec is looking to the creation, among French Canadians, that only as Quebecers can they enjoy the right to use their own language, preserve their own culture, live as their own way. English-speaking provinces in varying degrees that share like immigrants from a foreign country. Therefore, say the separatists and the new separatists, let us accept the category if we are treated as foreigners let us be foreigners in the alien lands west of the Ottawa and east of the Mississippi.

Only English Canada can dole out aid after too-well-founded failure. The federal government is partly no doubt because it is one that stands like the country's last line of defence in the domestic and has perhaps exhausted its own degree of authority through its proposal for a new bill of rights to the Court and to be a help if it succeeds. But generally, the burden of action rests upon the provinces.

It is because such a well hoped province exists, and because a watershed divides the English majority from Quebec's, that the province has always enjoyed and taken for granted. This manifest injustice will have to be corrected before we can pretend that all Canadians are treated equally, and before we can hope to build no all-Canadian patriotism on all reports and circumstances.

In fact they have a weak case for demanding more power. No provincial government – with the partial exception of Saskatchewan – has a good record in the fields of social welfare which, as they keep insisting, are part of their jurisdiction. In one provincial field after another a back federal action is the provincial authorities' last resort, and they often moved reluctantly and sluggishly. The governments of Quebec have a record that is certainly no better and in many cases worse than that of

All Canadians, of both cultural communities, should learn to distinguish between the just grievances of First-people's claims, on the one hand, and the spurious claims of power-hungry local politicians on the other. We should be as quick to correct the former as we should be slow to resolve the latter.

We started making your Color TV in

Just about 50 years ago the first Toshiba electrical engineers came off the beach and a company was born which now employs 120,000 people. Lamps came first, eventually giant generators to tiny transistors, huge locomotives and minute parts such as transistors. Lately, Toshiba has become one of the world leaders in color TV production. In fact, our color TV tubes are used everywhere, many of them in sets made by other manufacturers.

Toshiba electrical and electronic products now power the world over from 81 factories and 83 subsidiaries. Most of them organized in our extensive research labs, where some 1,100 specialists are at work. Our 19-inch TV shown here is one example of Toshiba's quality leadership. See one, you'll find you can actually see the difference. It's a hand-wired set with fine, true color, no fading or fuzzing. Trouble-free adjusting or correcting.

Remember the name Toshiba. We've been preparing since 1875 for the place we mean to win in your life.

In marriage, you're torn between your job and your family, but I know I could keep a good balance. I can't put it into words, but I know I'd do it right without thinking. But I don't like this 'you as one' view in marriage. You've got to stay an individual, you must be yourself and have your own interests. Your mate is something you come back to, not something that follows you wherever you go. You know love is forced when everything she does starts to bug you. It's as simple as that." ## BY DOUGLAS MARSHALL

In a CATHEDRAL workshop in northern France a couple of months ago a 26-year-old youth performed what was for him an extraordinary feat. The youth, recently released and still living from a nervous disorder that made his limbs tremble, was gradually piecing together a mosaic tile sculpture. The basic design, a nativity scene, was already mapped out for him. He finished it and then unexpectedly added a mouth of his own—a simple frown picture in the top left-hand corner. The frown was a gift, the first he could give, to the art teacher who was helping him.

It is moments like this, the moment the art teacher said, "Thank you," and the released youth smiled, that Jean François Vanier has cleared the road of his life to lasting possibility.

For the past three years Vanier, the third son of Canada's last governor general, has presided over a village complex for retarded adults in Trout-Bassin, some 60 miles north of Paris. His "boys" are the adults, most in their 20s by the beginning of the year. Most are in their early 20s, but one is as young as 14 and others are in their 30s. They include deaf, epileptics and menapausal with varying intelligence quotients but none is so severely retarded as to be unable to dress or feed himself. Most of the boys will remain at Trout-Bassin and Vanier, now 36, intends to grow old along with them—being both their father and, in the sense that the retarded are similar to the elderly and infirm, their son.

"These boys are refugees from homes where the way of family has broken up," says Vanier. "Because of their own handicaps or lack of understanding or the staff of institutions society outside would be hell for them. Here we're trying to reconstruct their personalities."

The reconstructing process is partly medical. About one third of the boys are under intensive treatment with drugs. And Vanier works in close consultation with psychiatrists provided by the Department of L'Orléans, the local provincial government that finances the project out of public funds and by taking salaries who can afford to pay. But the basic treatment Vanier provides is something that is seldom if ever found in the large, efficient but soulless state asylums to which such retarded are normally consigned. Truly, offers these people a chance to live not as damaged people confined from life but as "human beings who have the right to love and be loved."

"Our aim," explains Vanier, "is the fulfillment of all a boy's spiritual and human possibilities. We are recovering the primacy of life. People long missing if any of the boys will be able to find a place in society. A few may but that's not the point. First to have people happy in the world is enough."

For Vanier, the great essence of human happiness lies in the momentary, materialistic values achieved in 19th century society. When he talks his shaggy-clumped frame into a chair and begins talking incoherently about his philosophy is / continued on page 33

The Beautiful People of Detroit

A REPORT ON HOW IT FEELS TO BE BLACK

Mrs. Shipp is Dorothy Shipp. She's 22, a cashier in a Detroit fish restaurant, and her current delight is that friends call her The Negro Beauty because she's very beautiful. — Like the women of the Italian American, she has a classic forehead with open thick-coated eyes. Black lips, a flat nose that has that, without the spray of the hot comb, would be like a beauty halo. She says she used to be a wallflower because she didn't talk anything like the girls Negro boys really loved, but that confidence in the past year things changed and now she's got more notice than the rest. "I used to be too Negro but now the fashion has come around to me. The boys think I'm... well, more beautiful than I was," she giggles.

Actually, Dorothy had been going better and better looking for a year or so, but with the Detroit riots in July she finally blossomed. By any reasonable objective standards she's always been gorgeous, but the U.S. Negro, in the absence of a powerful black culture, long since fell back to the postcard-and-cotton psychology of Madison Avenue. Even in the black ghetto, the where the pot the pot.

But on July 23 when Detroit police raided an illegal Negro club on Twelfth Street a few blocks from Dorothy's home, and all hell broke loose. It was an all-out riot—violence, destruction, but Negroes call it "the war" or the "revolution." Before a sunset, 40 were killed in fire or gun battles. 200 were injured, 471 buildings were gutted or damaged and only seven hundred left to sustain the cost put up in half a billion dollars

When it ended, the Negroes who took part felt elated. "It was like we won all having a great party, a carnival," said one. The Negro middle class carried with them and dignified, but also felt good, the black men had stood up to Whiteness in the riotous and baby had actually won! To the Detroit Negro is all U.S. Negroes the color of the black in London suddenly had a new meaning. Black and beautiful. A year two years ago that would have been a contradiction in terms. But the new generation of new Negroes who's learning, slowly, to be proud of his blackness. The U.S. ugliness is that to do so he must attack white society.

"There'll be another rebellion if the white cops who murdered black men get away with it"

God is black

George Sweed, 44, wears a 30-second machine gun bullet about his neck as "a shame against all evils," Wanda says, at church. Sweed, an artist and father of three, is gay, bisexual and co-leader of the all-black City Wide Outreach Action Committee set up after the riots to secure a new deal for black Negroes. He painted the black Vayn Miller and Gail in the same, mother's neighborhood, the Central United Church of Christ, where in August they staged a "people's tribunal" to try to absolve three white police men accused of murdering Negroes during the riots. The verdict, guilty Sweed, white officers were the instigators and paid men involved with a white-owned, black-owned hardware, said that "if justice isn't done — if these cops get away with anything — there will be another riot." You must realize the police have treated the black man as though he were less than human, and so the next, in his mind, are a symbol of all the black men who, in fact, in Detroit, if they white power structure permits anything less than justice, it will demolish all their present and future, everything." Sweed claims the riots were born a black nationalist, that the riot he has his several objectives beyond his rage: a change, that he remembers it, possible. To most blackmen, he has a background, who refused to shake hands with white.

Pretty racist

"When a white man believes in me as though he thinks all colored women should stand as good for him, then I feel insulted, but it doesn't change me, it respects him." Christine Walker, 25, a very attractive and highly educated social worker, is an unashamed racist. "I've never dated a white man," she said. "Apart from what my friends would think, it would be impossible for him to convince me that he believed in me was possible, that he thought of me as an equal and not a prospective partner in some sexual fantasy."

I'll die like a man

"I never get 100 calls of white auto tax collectors. Well, I own a man in a 1000 mile of 100. He's a 100 mile woman's $200 call, shows me a mile, so I take him to the police and give him a good reason to take of that call and go home in his hands and shoes. Much more cool, that's all." The "good reason" he showed Farmer gave was a check of the number he is accused of taking he says it's useful in his job as road manager for an organizing group, involving the Black people. Just before his move

After all, his father kept me mother, otherwise I wouldn't be the way I am." She's self-confident. She is also uncomfortable in the presence of white women. "Because these men have a standard of beauty I can never reach." Chris said she never had a white man but she never had a white man. "When the climate seemed to change and I had a boyfriend who wasn't ashamed of being black and made me feel better of love and proud of what I am." She is very contemptuous of Negroes who marry white women. "See Henry Robinson — I don't date that man."

was pulled by a leader. His, who started his business on the side walk. He saw two men, Negroes, driving by on TV. "I got my shirt and I looked at him with one eye in an alley after he put my TV in a truck. He keeps saying what I mean him do with my own eye, so I know him and take his head to come to the first printer. What happened to him? Don't know." Note's other brother with the Man, after while driving, he's usually kept. "They said I had the way they live," he says. "The man and I'd like a man, and they better know it."

Food for festive living

Quebec

An original Christmas

By MICHELE LEBLANC

There's a special way to celebrate Christmas in Quebec. It's not just the food, but the atmosphere. The festive spirit is everywhere, from the decorations to the music. The streets are filled with the scent of pine and the sound of carols. The people are warm and welcoming, and the food is delicious. It's a truly unique experience that you won't want to miss.

Festive cuisine from Quebec

In the 15 years this level is the September dinner. Miss Boudreau brought this festive Christmas dinner of the most festive times of the year in November. The guests table is really impressive but remember, many of the dishes served are completely poisoned, and have been used for generations. For two weeks days are connected with visiting, eating and drinking.

Below are a small part of a recipe from Miss Boudreau's cookbook, L'art Culinaire au Foyer des Boudreau by de la Boudreau. The Boudreau has been set down to the 16th, but it's the last of the last, but for huge buffet entertaining and is just as successful in large quantities as in the form.

Tourtière

- |                   |                  |
|-------------------|------------------|
| 1/2 lb. pork      | Salt and pepper  |
| 1/2 lb. lean beef | 1 onion          |
| 1/2 lb. veal      | 2/3 lb. potatoes |
| 1/2 lb. chicken   | 1/2 lb. pork     |
| 1/2 lb. salt pork |                  |

At night prepare the meat by cutting the pork, veal, beef, chicken and pork fat into small cubes. Season with salt, pepper and onion and mix in a bag. Cook and put in a bowl, fresh place.

The next morning, cut the potatoes in small cubes. Salt and put in a 20" x 4" x 10" bag. Cut potatoes into halves. Line 1/2 lb. each these quantities for two similar quantities with salt, pepper, bringing pork over top edge. Fill pork with alternate layers of meat and potatoes until all ingredients are used. Cover all with boiling water and seal gas with top layer of pork. Cut hole in center of the pie with a hot steam range. Cover contents with foil. Bake in a moderate oven (350°F) for four hours. Remove the foil for the last 30 minutes of baking time to brown the crust. (Serves 10.)

The original recipe of the Montpelier (the name of Quebec) called for one whole, a partridge, one pound of meat and one pound of low pork instead of the more modern meat and today.

Suet pastry

- |                              |                      |
|------------------------------|----------------------|
| 1/2 lb. suet, finely chopped | 1/2 cup salt         |
| 4 eggs all purpose flour     | 1/2 cup white (suet) |
| 2 cups baking powder         |                      |

Mix suet with flour, baking powder and salt. Stir in enough water to maintain the flour. Knead dough together and shape into a ball.

Gâteau au lard

- |                      |                            |
|----------------------|----------------------------|
| 1 lb. pork fat       | 1/2 lb. finely ground beef |
| 1 pint boiling water | 1 egg yolk                 |
| 2 cups sugar         | 1 cup sugar                |
| 1 cup molasses       | 1 cup sugar                |

| 1 lb. brown sugar    | 1 cup sugar                |

Put pork fat through meat grinder using fast blade. Add with one pint boiling water. Once after a few minutes. Cover dish and cover with boiling water to soften. Drain and continue with sugar, molasses, eggs, milk and brown sugar. Mix together and set in flour, rolling, color and sugar. After the mixture (beautiful) put fat in the flour from mixture and mix well together.

Line large (18 inch) cathartosis (suet) for a deep, impregnable tube part) half double thickness of ground brown paper. Place shallow pan of hot water on bottom side of oven. Turn heater low (preheat) pan and spread evenly. Bake in a slow oven (275°F) until cake is evenly cooked. Remove from oven and let cool approximately three to three and a half hours. Cut the cake with a piece of heavy brown paper. Top of cake is becoming too rapidly.

Remove cake from pan, pull off paper and allow to cool completely. Wrap closely in heavy brown paper, please wrap of thick brown paper and store in a cool place. The cake is best if served in two weeks before serving. At the cake, eggs, may be served two or three times with a little brandy if desired. *

How Calvert found a new way to make rye incredibly smooth.

The name of the rye is Grand Prix. We made it incredibly smooth by making it dry.

And we made it dry by discovering a new way to make rye without any cloying sweetness.

This makes Grand Prix a full-bodied rye so smooth you can actually sip it straight. And like it.

Nobody ever made a rye as smooth as Grand Prix before because nobody ever knew how. It took Calvert ten years to do it, and naturally our Master Blender is pretty proud of it.

But try it yourself. In ten seconds you'll know why he's so proud.

Calvert Grand Prix. The world's first dry rye.

The bitter taste of money

Al Kulan struck it rich in the Yukon. Art Jellinek could have. Kulan lived to regret it. Jellinek died to escape it. This is their story

BY CATHERINE BRISLIN

ONCE UPON A TIME there was a land, a northern colony called the Yukon, which fell prey to a raging gold fever. The fever drew men from far across the world and led them into desolate and murderous adventures. A few became rich from the gold, but most vagabonded and a few died of starvation. None of it happened long ago, in the 1890s—but it is also happening today.

This is the tale of two prospectors, two tough little men who were deeply able to see fantastic wealth in this land's cold gray rocks. Al Kulan came from Kansas, Art Jellinek came from Hungary, but both of them belonged to the Yukon. And only the Yukon could have taught them the surprising and simple lesson they learned about wealth—and survival.

With his prematurely gray hair and weathered skin, Al Kulan looked a little like a bartender or an insurance salesman. Art Jellinek's pale and scrawny face gave him the air of a schoolteacher. Both were clean, very much in their early 40s, and some people might have said that was all there was in common between Kulan, a ruggedly friendly man, and Jellinek, a lonely loner. But that judgment would have overlooked each man's most distinctive quality: a hard-driving obsession for riches. And one thing the Yukon has plenty of: wealth. It has 200,000 square miles, 15,000 people and almost no money resources. Except for wildlife and government, its only industry comes from its rocks.

In other days the Yukon prospectors went pick-and-patch work over entire districts, searching only for gold and search to uncover anything they found for ready cash. The new breed was helicopter and Granger country, and they rarely a prospector in one hand and a bulldozer in the other. The best and self-righted prospectors will search in mountainous, flat and low problems, forests, frozen rivers and wherever else might afford their claim. Like prospectors of old, they work for a grubstake, always taking the big risk in hope of a big find. But, unlike the old timers, they always hang onto a percentage of the action. And they no longer search only for gold. Since 1950 they have been looking steadily for base metals—copper, lead, zinc—and for asbestos.

One thing about prospectors that never changes is "a really poor toughness about them that they carry to their graves," says one mine developer. In the Yukon's short, four-month season a prospector must work fearfully, pushing through the wilderness under a 45-pound pack which, as one of these puts it, "is too much to carry and not enough to get along on."

Because as Al Kulan once said "the bush will chew a pair of pants off you in three wet days," prospectors' trousers are usually patched with canvas, rubber legs and liquid cement—"How you patch the patches." Their pockets are stuffed with rice, nature and wilderness knowledge. Most prospectors go 30 miles a day, but a dozen like Al Kulan can cover up to 50. He has been known to work until 1:30 a.m., see his sleeping bag with some socks and / continued on page 29

Claire Haddad, Canada's leading designer of at-home clothes, produces an infinite variety of loungewear. At far left, a Persian pantalon in pure wool with a matching cami top—about $65. The back-lace caftan can be worn belted or loose over a long-sleeve nightdress. About $40 the set.

If you're adventurous, you could wear a pop-top with matching sandals by Mrs. Haddad almost anywhere. Most women will be content to use them for aprils, or anything else that's sporty and casual. They come in a variety of prints to flatter a single stretch below. About $50.

Housecoats? Negligees? Filmy draperies you wouldn't be caught dead in beyond the intimacy of the bedroom? That's a notion as outdated as a phrase like hubba-hubba. Canadian manufacturers who produced the versatile at-home clothes on these pages designed them to make every woman's home life more delightful, a male's more sensual.

Evening pajamas are always the most comfortable thing to wear, and this year two manufacturers have produced extremely good designs (right). Printed lounge by Harvey Woods, about $25. Cutsie set by Krayer-Fish, about $26.

FANTASY LIVING

Remember those movies of the Thirties, the ones where Carole Lombard or Claudette Colbert or someone else scragglyly graceful leaped about the set in masses of diaphanous creations or in plain flowing silk pants? That was the last one of authentic glamour, as far as it goes. Until now. These days, designers are once again coming out with at-home clothes glamorous enough to satisfy anybody's fantasy life. The designs of the fifties have one or two things over the Thirties. They aren't completely expensive, and you can actually move around in them without tripping over trains, flounces and bows. They're sturdy enough to stand up to an early morning approximating session if you're so inclined. And most of them can be thrown into the washing machine for cleaning. It's absolutely unnecessary to appear for dinner with a husband or friend and not look fragile, feminine and sexy. The garments shown on these pages can be worn to dinner parties, picnic parties, to some instances to double duty at the theatre, and all of them are just right for so intimate evening alone with a man. Any man. It's not really so difficult these days to bring your fantasy life right out into the open — with a sane outcome, mind, and the right sleepwear (a) indicates the luxury of these clothes, we photographed them at the Sculpture '67 Exhibition at Toronto's City Hall.

THE NATIONAL HOCKEY LEAGUE, most sports-writers and many fans are convinced, will soon be the same again.

They reckon that the compression of the league this year from six to 12 teams will dilute the average quality of hockey to the level of mid-1980s. What's more, the dilemma is all at once bottomed. It's unambiguous that the referees kept most of their sticks and dust off of the new capes — a $300,000-per-player — in moments of icing, regulars, personal foul-outs, and minor league players who had sticks or were put against the NHL. — Walt

EVER MORE, the new season appears to have a whole new focus for high-level hockey is no longer, just these days — Philadelphia's St. Louis and Pittsburgh — which have had NHL teams but lost them through mismanagement.

Put that way, it's a gloomy prospect. It's right that the storm-with-shards spouts neither reason, not at all necessarily a pernicious one: why the NFL will never be the same again, the league now embroiled and embowed by one Jack Kent Cooke.

Conkle, who has debited in and refereed most major sports in the past 20 years, grew into hockey for the first time this year as the president of the Los Angeles Kings of the expanded NHL. He is the 25-officials associate coach, manager, scout, publicist and chief cheerleader.

□ A team whose players' names are as well known to hockey fans (with the single exception of goalie Terry Sawchuk) that sports which caused Cocks to wonder about the motivation of his choice: really such players exist or are available?

□ A. Broadway arena, the Los Angeles Forum, which must be seen to be believed, and maybe not even then. It is the greatest small pelican that sits on the balcony of the Colosseum at Ancient Rome, of which the Forum is, in fact, a modernized copy. The Forum has some thing else going for it that could happen only in Los Angeles. Where else do people go to buy jeans to pick at other fans' coats? Coach's rule will be lived with customer bias. Fresh Shirts alone has taken 15 women (others, other top stars of action and television, who have bought two or more shirts) to take to City Grant, Sunny Thomas, Rick Ryan.

Denny Kays, Don Martin, and David Johnson

• A trio of profitable music foods that would have taken a long, untamed frontier. Cooky seems to develop one with Tremeau's Southern Symplic and French Imprints over past seasons of Louisiana (Ruff) Ruff or NRP ex-Louisiana star and currently offers several million-selling albums, mostly at the Los Angeles Kings (Kings Cooks). "We want to replace, Monty," says Tremeau's devoted hockey sister. Another Cooky lead that will undoubtedly solidify means of newspaper space is with the likes of that spot "The Litterally Cautious Superheroes": who have created Cooky's club of players. For example, Dick Bushman's success in the Tremeau-Ginsler and Mail column.

Can you visualize David Laroche, Bob Will, Ed Keyel, Paul Paped, Terry Gray and Bryan Campbell in big-league uniforms? If you can, you have as good an imagination as Jack Cooke, who somehow picked them.<sup>22</sup>

What hurt was that Crode not only picked them — they were his top six choices.

For local consumption Cooke has arranged a major endorsement with the California State of San Francisco by convincing them of trying to put away some of the phyllos.

Among the things to see at the Forum will of course be Cooke himself. A long-time discoverer of the Cooke phenomenon, he's got to put it into focus. "The sheep look different when individually, but get blurred into a general impression as a whole when they start to move," he says. "It's like a money maker. But there's no Acute, it's a Phenomenon. When it's around things happen—or seem to happen."

Remember when Coen Stryke used to cheerfully Toronto Maple Leafs fans and Canucks' largest TV audience by circling the rink, he is hard and sexy on his face? Well, Cooke is a section 55, he replaced the former Stryke as the most realistic owner in hockey.

"What's the fun of buying out five million dollars," he asks, "if you can't get extra credit when you're bought?"

Of course there may well be some limits to the half-price rule. / continued on page 11

Where bright kids can break the classroom barrier

While educators wrestle with the problems of slow learners, the equally pressing needs of the exceptionally bright* have been neglected. Now an exciting experiment in learning is freeing frustrated minds—and challenging teaching's old lock-step methods

*The most brilliant U.S. students, who are invited to work on an experiment in the Royal Canadian Mounted Police's summer program for gifted students, called the Royal Canadian Mounted Police's (RCMP) program for gifted students. The program is a summer program for gifted students, called the Royal Canadian Mounted Police's (RCMP) program for gifted students. The program is a summer program for gifted students, called the Royal Canadian Mounted Police's (RCMP) program for gifted students.

His mentor leads a group at Ottawa's National Museum of Science and Technology, has a question he likes to turn at university graduate students when he begins a lecture course. It's designed to show the prodigy graduates that they don't know everything. And it works. None of them has ever been able to answer it. And for laughs, Dr. Baird read the question out to 50 high-school students attending the Royal Canadian Mounted Police's summer program last July.

"There's a shallow bay on the Canadian Sea," he read. "Does anyone know what they mean by that?"

Epstein calls it "a" and 16-year-old Robert Bess, of Winnipeg, "It was an undergraduate. 'What side of the sea is it?' for challenge." Robert: "The east side, sir."

Bess discovered that his surprise and went on with his lecture. It turned out to be one of the most stimulating teaching sessions he'd ever had. The 20 other professors and lecturers who took part in the six-week summer program had similar experiences. "This was an ordinary class. The 13 girls and 22 boys involved in the RCMP program were called from some 800 applicants and probably represented the cream of the grades 11 and 12 senior students across Canada.

These students are the latest dividends on the crash investment in science education that followed the bumpy-bump of the first Sputnik. They can play with mathematical concepts that baffled their parents, build engines in their bedrooms before becoming by specialization and manufacture LEO in the school lab.

But they are not the wrong, precocious, know-it-all floozies we were called when Jack. It would be more accurate to label them over-achievers — brighter than the average high-school grad but just as involved in the pleasure and problem of growing up as the boy in the next door. They are to be envied when the leisure of old-timey writer is in literature — students who should be encouraged and supported in their more. Their hang-up is that the high school system in this country is simply not equipped intellectually or institutionally to study these scientific curiosity and hunger for knowledge.

Education theorists have expended considerable energy in recent years developing special programs for what they call under-achievers. Nobody in Canada has paid much practical attention to the problems of the over-achievers. But gifted pupils are already put in much out of place in the normal classroom as before-average students.

"Our country programs that simply are more in my words than I is used in all the last high-school years," said Robert Bess, who was counting his days until he could begin a math and physics course at the University of Chicago. "It's not just learning new facts. It's learning about the methods of research and the way scientists think. That's something you never get in high school."

The RCMP program, which started in 1965, closely solves some of the problems facing students like Robert. So far it is the only one of its kind in Canada. Bess has four similar courses, and then, in more than 200 in the United States. But in 1966 the RCMP program had to be cancelled because the Institute ran out of money. It was re-opened last summer only as a result of unexpected financial help from United Funds Management Ltd., a nationally movement firm. As a conditional project, the firm agreed to underwrite the $750,000-a-year program until 1969.

In 1923, a 1-minute station-to-station call costs to cost just $8.75. In today's money that would be more like $17,404. But now you can do it for just $1.99. Cheap calls — but what you say and how you say it can add to almost beyond price. This ever-growing value has come about through the increasing volume of long Distance calls — and the broadening use of Direct Distance Calling. And the speed, quality and convenience of Long Distance

They probably will have to die in increasing numbers for the United States has trapped itself in a killing mechanism wherein it seems, the white, stark civilization of itself is pushing upon the distant features of the Negro, and he is willing to grant the Negro anything but human status.

[illegible]

The so far little-known history of the Negro's liberation from the halls of power. Unsurprisingly, the Negro's leaders are the same elected officials who gloriously represent the rest of their constituents and the businessmen who eagerly sought money from black people. To ask who are the Negro's leaders is to ask that the very truth and righteousness of the nation are not obviously important to anyone. Who are the leaders or lack of leaders that who could start power over their groups on a national scale? They do not care because they are not needed. It is the state of prevailing white power that makes black people necessary.

Could you spend a day like this in your home?

7:00 a.m. When Dad reaches for his razor, does he use it where he wants to—or where he has to? If your bathroom doesn't have the required outlets and modern lighting you'll have to leave. Or worse, it was used in the days when the shaving mug was more a basin and to good grooming. But times have changed. Why not have your ideas revealed to meet present day needs? You'll be amazed at how up-to-date wiring will help modernize your bathroom—and even other rooms in your home.

7:30 a.m. Do your kitchen appliances have to take turns waiting for an outlet? Do you have to wait until the coffee's ready before you plug in the toaster? Kitchen wiring with built-in—some built-in—lets you use as many appliances at the same time as you desire. Status panel up to date wiring will give you more electrical outlets all through your home to save you time and frustration all day long.

10:30 a.m. Does your home have power enough to run as many large appliances as you'd really like to own? Modern wiring will carry plenty of power for the washer, dryer, or dishwasher you need today and any other electrical immersion you may add in the future. It's also worth noting that up-to-date wiring will help all your appliances work more efficiently and give you longer service.

11:30 a.m. Are you mowing the most of electrical wiring outside your home? Can you mow your lawn, can you power tools, just your coffee, do just lean back and watch TV on your patio or porch? All these currents most comfortable in modern wiring. Something else to consider is outdoor lighting. It can do a lot for the looks of your home—and the business of your outdoor entertaining.

2:15 p.m. When you shove your feet into slippers, does your home provide a comfortable, cozy place for you to relax in your home or elsewhere? It might be! If modern wiring is holding your back home for better or ill, as comforting, in the new line comforts of electric heating, you have another good reason to consider rewiring. After all, there's no place like home, why not make it as cozy as you can?

7:45 p.m. When the home functions better, so do you. When there's electricity, help, take so much as it could? With modern wiring, he'll have all the outlets he wants exactly where he wants them. He'll have plenty of lighting, too, even the most tricky jobs. No more could matter his hobby (even to pleasure), no hope, a few kind words about his work.

7:00 p.m. Do you always have lots of hot water in your home? Or are bath times suspended on laundry days? Put in and in hot water problems, once and for all with a Cascade 52 electric water heater. It will supply all the hot water you'll ever likely demand.

11:30 p.m. Tonight, will you relax knowing you've done something to add to the comfort, coziness, and value of your home? You could. Just get it done with a qualified electric contractor. Or call your Hydrex. Find out how the safety and convenience of all electric wiring can really become a part of your home. You could be pleasantly surprised to find a hot modern wiring costs less than you think.

We built the new Volvo 144 for the guy who's going to own it after you.

There are two ways to build a car. First, you can make it for the first owner, who usually only keeps his car two or three years.

Second, you can make it for the second owner, the poor devil who makes a life's work of inheriting other people's problems.

When we built the Volvo 144, we set out to please the second owners, figuring that if we succeeded, we'd automatically satisfy the people who buy these new.

Apparently we succeeded. As Road & Track Magazine says: "Volvo makes everything just a little stronger than is absolutely required, uses better materials than are absolutely required, and spends more time testing the components to their limits than is absolutely required. The result is a car that is solid, practical, efficient and long-lived—everything transportation really ought to be..."

And as the London Daily Telegraph says: "It is the sort of car whose owner would feel a traitor if he even thought of trading it in before it was 10 years old."

Which brings up a problem we never even considered.

We built the 144 with the second owner in mind.

But it may be an awfully long time before he gets a chance to find out.

Allan and Georgina write, bless 'em. (But who are they?)

offerer that Christmas the December 20 I received a card that said simply: "And they were not there!" It was a request. The writer, obviously nervous, was the card dated twenty month, was was submitted to sign his name. Obviously he was a no proponent of the war, so I sent I sent him an original Christmas card.

This is the kind of keeping in touch that Christmas cards have lost to. Literally, it's a breakdown in communication. If any one of the Twelve had sent me even a birthday card or letter, speaking from out of someone's life, that the message would have been immediately answered.

And right on for his mother's heart had any of the month-day stations for becoming to go down a personal message. opportunities this kindled them. One morning the program's coauthors, Tim Robertson and his wife Gay (both graduate students at Carleton), discovered that one of the jobs was missing. Although very popular and numerous online, Faculty of 11 is in the "unpopular" (and 13-year-old Marjane Dey's, of Without You, is the laboratory. She was identified as a chemistry concentration at a very good school and the students had been served as dinner.

Margaret plans to take chemistry at the University of Toronto and become a medical researcher where the program was. The RCI program, she said, helped her organize her ideas about science and her own future. For one thing, she became interested in such methodology and spent hours in the lab studying samples of lake water and testing streams of experiments with confidence.

"On the science program work at the lab without people looking over your shoulder all the time," said this year and the highest experiments are to study ourselves."

The students were particularly excited by the sophisticated scientific equipment. Dr. Bala managed to bring in several kinds of equipment. There was an electron microscope which was in use every day, and a complete set of chromatography equipment. Part one of the program involves, but access to a big central library computer in Toronto.

"The job itself got a chance to make experiments like this in high school," said Denise Price, 11, who comes from Brampton, Ont. "The students have sufficient lab equipment for long science, but there's not enough to really explore very quickly."

Guest who plans to take math and physics at the U of T said the teaching staff surprised her about the RCI program was the other students. She had been impressed into thinking that some average students were inside.

"That I found the talk here was so human in everything else and this I was having the time."

The Robertson aligned with the risk of measuring some sort of discipline, some discipline that had an already normal collection of average boys and girls in their hands. There were the common middle of upper grade kids, a few more of average nature between the others and a spontaneous group something a little from world college. Robertson's son, 11, after some, at no time? Within a couple of days the students were all on a first-name basis and had organized themselves into the badge players and the other players. They were on up a second money called the Cult of the Prune, to represent when one of the students made a dip of the finger and described it as "a supreme being."

Seventeen-year-old Olga Vukobrat, of Vancouver, said she was worried that the program might be out in the big world of academic discipline about science. Instead, she was struck by the rapid progress of the group. "They are ready to do anything and are not about anything," she said. "They are not at all the group of average-minded students I expected."

In the morning, Dr. Bala was surprised that students were perhaps a little more formal-minded. He would have liked to have more direct from a discussion about science and her lab about prunes. But in the program discussed on page 64.

Everyone knows who drinks Seagram's Mellow 83

It's funny what you hear about Mellow 83. Like, it's the whiskey for old fogies. Or only hard-core types drink it. We know different. All kinds of people are drinking it these days—and for the best of all reasons. They like the mellow mellow way it tastes. Who are those individual whiffs they weren't born in 1983. And they certainly weren't born yesterday.

Timid types, that's who.

veloped a better clear idea (he wouldn't say, at least) which results of some of the academic problems they're about.

For one thing, there was a friendly but fairly tense division between the students who thought of themselves as expressivists and those who considered themselves theorists.

The superintendents agreed that the thermometer was the symbol of success. The cynical "Tennies" saw a thermometer — do you think he had much work today?" That created a second segment. Can someone tell me how doing work affects me, he was asked with great wisdom at student dinner? Most of the students simply hoped they would never be faced with such a test of commitment.

The opportunity is there, but the will or commitment, and especially the ability to find out what other youth groups think, is part of all of the many large limitations of the RCT youth programs. In many respects, it is to provide an outlet for a high school system that have gifted students to learn, think, and connect and have many of those engaged and excited.

For about half the volume, the property includes an abstract in a parameter table and helps them make up their minds. For others like 12-year-old Ralph Douglas, of 20 West Lake Street, it merely considers the issue by pointing to a wide range of possibilities. "I was planning to take maths and physics," said Ralph. "Now I'm not so sure. I never thought physics would be as interesting as I found it."

The group sits a dinner is based on a question from G. K. Chesterton. It says that they want to see the solution, it is that they can't see the problem. There is no question that Chesterton would have approved of what happened at Lufthansa last summer. I am not prepared and I'm still confused," said George Hickey. "But at least I can now understand the confusion."

There's only one real problem caused by the RCI summer workers' protests still — and that's the fact that the departments of education that operate each year in the U.S. problem is simply this: what is going to be done about the thousands of other non-university students in our high school system? As the very fact, they should be there or have been with them in the past, in Canada. ★

Second, he suggests a "Common Market" between Quebec and Ontario would have no truly harmful effects on either, but Quebec would gain a new power in selected local markets.

There is no reason to suppose any central government present or future would do this (each province does). But if a "stronger" State of Quebec had to come to its feet tomorrow, it would certainly overcome difficulties. Radical changes to the country will come when the Quebec Liberal Party government (1991) outlined some of them in a widely publicized speech.
